Book of the Week

Rebel Girls (Their Fight for the Vote) by Jill Liddington

Rejecting the deadening conventions of their Victorian elders, the rebel girls demanded new freedoms and new rights. They took their suffrage message out to the remotest Yorkshire dales and fishing harbours to win Edwardian hearts and minds. Heroic women who have disappeared from written records have been restored by Jill Liddington's painstaking research into sources including back copies of local newspapers, diaries, census records, and recently uncovered government records disclosing details of covert surveillance carried out on women prisoners. The intriguing characters to emerge include 16-year-old Huddersfield weaver Dora Thewlis, who was arrested at a demonstration and found herself catapulted onto the tabloid front-pages as "Baby Suffragette."

Poem of the Week

Dartmoor by Nic Walde

I must step out on the moors again, those ancient moors of my birth allowing my feet, in rhythmical beat, to reconnect with the earth with the sun's song, the wind's howl, the paths o'er the hills engraving the gnarled oaks in their twisted pose, and the purple heather waving.

I must step out on the moors again and walk the meandering lanes past the churchyards and the farmyards, out to the Roebuck's domains where a ribbon of river, in distance a-glimmer, dances away to the sea, and the peat bogs and the granite tors still whisper intrigues to me.

I must step out on the moors again, once more before it's late down the secret traces to hidden places, over the stiles and gates where the pipit's call and the foxes cry, and the dappled, shady dells with Ox-eyes, and Eyebrights, are carpeted in Bluebells.
