Book of the Week

Book of the Week: Lost Voices of the Titanic by Nick Barratt

This is the story of the world's most infamous ship, told in the words of those who designed her, built her, sailed her and survived her sinking.

Starting from its original conception and design by the owners and naval architects at the White Star Line through construction at Harland and Wolff's shipyards in Belfast, Nick Barratt explores the pre-history of the Titanic. He examines the aspirations of the owners, the realities of construction and the anticipation of the first sea-tests, revealing that the seeds of disaster were sown by the failure to implement sealed bulkheads.

Barratt then looks at the Titanic's maiden voyage in April 1912, examining the lives of various passengers in more detail, from the first-class aristocrats to the families in third-class and steerage. Similarly, the stories of representatives from the White Star Line who were on board, as well as crew members, are told in their own words to offer a very different perspective on the voyage.

Finally, the book examines the disaster itself when Titanic struck the iceberg and sank hours later. Survivors from passengers and crew recount what happened, taking us back in time to the full horror of that freezing Atlantic night when up to 1,520 people perished.

Message from the Library

In order to give Year 11 students somewhere quiet to revise and organise themselves for their GCSE exams, we are currently operating a 'Working Lunch' policy in the Library.

This means the Library is closed to everyone except those wishing to work through their lunch time. The Ts & Cs are as follows: max of 4 to a table, no food or drink, if you are noisy, you will be asked to leave.

The Working Lunch system will be in place until half term.

Thank you, Mrs Fitz
